The more Charles A. Prouty explains, the worse his mix-up grows.

The Austria and Serbia scrap is almost lost sight of in the bigger fight.

A hearty welcome is extended to the members of the Washington County Veterans' association. May their stay be most enjoyable and their union with Windsor and Orange county veterans at Randolph be a prolongation of a splendid time.

No more tragic ending to an automobile fatality could be imagined than the suicide of the chauffeur, one of the few survivors of the roll down a 50-foot embankment. The double tragedy at Pownal, this state, and North Adams, Mass., furnished some unusual features, and notably inexplicable in the case of the suicide of the chauffeur.

Those aeroplane sighting stations which Great Britain decided to place about its coast a few weeks ago do not appear so useless to-day as they seemed then. Indeed, stations to locate the approaching hostile aeroplanes will serve a very useful purpose, inasmuch as Great Britain is amply prepared against invasion by the water route, the only other way of approach to the tight little island in the Atlantic ocean. Possibly there was an inkling of some great event impending that caused Great Britain's decision to construct the stations.

Little complaint has been heard about road hogs in Vermont this season, but one has just been entered from East Middlebury, where, it is claimed, the driver of a heavy work team refused to turn out to let an automobile pass, with the result that in trying to get by, the driver of the automobile ran his car into the ditch and against a tree, the motor vehicle being badly smashed in the wrenching and the subsequent collision, although, fortunately, the four occupants were not injured to a serious extent. A slight exercise of decent courtesy of the road might have averted the accident, and, on the other hand, a curbing of the impetuosity of the automobile driver might have helped considerably, too.

President Wilson's address to the people of the United States, adjuring them to remain calm in the present crisis in Europe, is well made and timely because it comes at a time when the people of the United States have been stunned into calmness by the very enormity of the drama being enacted in Europe. Three weeks ago one could scarcely have found who would have predicted that all Europe would be in the throes of great international conflict to-day; yet every nation is an armed camp, so to speak, in this short time and actual clash of arms has occurred in many spots throughout the continent. No more cooling cause than this was needed to make the United States halt and consider seriously the ravages of warfare. Americans never were more calm in contemplation of the awful possibilities than they are at the present time, and they are not likely to be drawn into excitement other than that which comes to the spectator of a great drama. Yet President Wilson's words will add strength to that position.

ENTANGLING ALLIANCES.

If one consideration has been pressed home to the United States more forcefully than far in the European warfare than any other single consideration it is that alliances among nations may be fully as baneful as helpful. Europe is a tangle of alliances, with the various nations so related and inter-related by agreements expressed and implied that all intents and purposes there are but two foes, the one headed by the powerful combination of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy and the other headed by the equally powerful triumvirate of Great Britain, Russia and France. The international affairs of most of the other states are hopelessly entangled with either the one or the other of these major combinations, so that when one becomes involved in complications it most surely leads to the dragging of the other ally into the embroilment. Germany very naturally went to the support of Austria-Hungary even though it had no axe of its own to grind. Italy's leanings are in the same direction by reason of the "triple alliance," although as yet the peninsula kingdom has kept free of active participation in the troubles. On the other side, Russia, taking the part of Serbia in the original quarrel, looks to France and Great Britain, its partners in the "triple entente," for support, and it already has received substantial support on the part of France by reason of active war operations by the French troops on the German border. Now, too, even Great Britain, considered one of the least hysterical of European nations, is most certainly drifting toward that condition in which it will be forced to show its hand as an active combatant in support of the above-mentioned "triple entente" and to guard also the little country of Belgium just across the English channel. Following those great leaders the other nations of Europe, and even of far-off Asia, are getting into line and affiliating themselves with the leaders toward whom natural inclinations direct. The great international feud is on. Inter-related national families are aligned in two columns, facing each other excitedly and expectantly.

Meanwhile the United States stands alone, untroubled by the strain of expressed or implied alliances, in a position to view the situation calmly and unwilling to take sides because unnecessary to do so. The United States has its friends, of course, and it has those who would be enemies at the least provocation; but it has no really entangling alliances which would cause the great republic to enter a fight at the drop of the hat or at the beck of some other nation. The United States is better off as it is, albeit there may be times when international combinations are helpful and powerful.

"The Romancers" To-night.

To-night at 8 o'clock, on the lawn of Mrs. Charles Smith, on Elm street, near the Matthews school, will be given an open-air production of "The Romancers," Rostand's famous comedy by the well-known Frank Lee Short company of New York. This company has just played in Lenox and Rutland with such great success as to be immediately booked for next year. The performance here is under the auspices of the Woman's club.

The players include a number of well-known names. There is Miss Katharine Vincent, who played the leading part in "Little Women," V. L. Granville, who was leading man for Forbes-Robertson; J. P. MacSweeney, of "Spring Tingle of the Madcap Duchess," etc. It has everywhere been pronounced the finest organization ever presented in pastoral plays, and this is their fifth successful season.

"The Romancers" is one of the funniest comedies ever written, and also has a charming love story and plenty of thrills. It is going to be an opportunity that every play-goer in Barre should take advantage of.—Adv.

For the Girl Who Dances.

In August Woman's Home Companion appears a page entitled "Good Ideas for Girls." Following is a suggestion of substitute for shoe buckles made for the girl who dances: "The rhinestone of cut-steel buckle which plays such a glittering part in modern footgear is, however, regrettably expensive. An effective and less costly substitute, not of the material but of the shape, is the rhinestone or steel button. Some of the smartest shoes, especially the walking slipper of patent leather and the evening slipper of black satin, are so ornamented. These buttons can be obtained in the shops in endless variety and their cost is infinitely less than that of buckles; indeed, there will be many a button bag that will yield up a pair or perhaps more of these shiny little treasures.

These buttons may be sewed directly on the slipper toe or may be centered in a tiny bow of two loops—no ends—of velvet, satin, grosgrain, or chiffon."

SPORTING NOTES.

Lieut. J. H. Ingram, a star athlete when he was attending Annapolis, has been ordered to report immediately to act as head coach of football for the Navy.

Kaiserling of Indianapolis is leading the Federal league pitchers with 11 victories and two defeats. Russell Ford has won 12 games and lost five. Seaton has won 16 victories and had seven losses. Quinn is credited with 15 wins and seven losses.

Tex Erwin, the veteran catcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has been given his unconditional release. He was sold to Cincinnati several weeks ago, but was later turned back to Brooklyn by Manager Herzog. Erwin leads the National league in batting, according to unofficial figures.

BETTER ROAD FOR ESSEX STREET

City May Get Quit Claim Deed and If So There Is Prospect of Improved Conditions—City Council Talked It Over.

Down from Essex street came its three abutting property owners to put the city council through its customary traces over the matter of highways last night. William Wylie, Peter Wallstrom and J. O. Beckley, who could feel their way from Essex heights to city hall if the earth were shrouded in stygian darkness, made their last plea for a possible route to their homes at the street's extremity. Twenty times, if two, they have wrestled with vacillating aldermen for their rights and if the signs are reliable they are on the eve of achieving their goal. The only man who has any hold whatsoever on the property in that locality has evinced a willingness to give the city a quit claim deed and that was the substance of the aldermen's report to the council. C. W. Perry has opened the way for an improved street and just as soon as the city council committee, the aldermen and the city engineer can get together for a conference on the requisites for a comfortable thoroughfare and the estimated expense, it is expected that the council will make final provisions for working what is now but a poor apology for a cow path, the petitioners claim.

Not without a good many ramifications, detours, side excursions and arguments beside the point, was the end attained. Last night's joint debate presented the spectacle of motions made and withdrawn and calls for a ye and nay vote. The petitioners reiterated their former threat to put the matter up to a court's committee and announced a new determination to carry their pleas beyond the shadow of city hall. With the broad armor of a quit claim deed practically ready for acceptance, the Essex street members threw down the gauntlet; and for once the council's shifting policy was abandoned. Alderman Cook moved that the deed be accepted and the street put in shape for travel at once.

The mayor took a stand at this juncture occupied attention. Inspector Rand reported on the following applications to build and permits were granted: John Turner, to build a dwelling at 175 Merchant street; John Ossola, to remodel dwelling at 12 George street; August Chato, to erect a barn on Colby street; Louis Roman, to make additions to his new store building at 59 Prospect street; Mrs. Mary Zanolini, to erect an annex to the south side of her store building at 34 North Main street; Trow & Holden, to build an addition to the south end of their plant on South Main street. The inspector's report for July, containing a record of 27 minor permits granted, was accepted and ordered filed. A communication from G. Gelpi asking permission to repair wall along Gunner brook at 417 North Main street was tabled, as it was decided that a permit is not necessary. A North Barre woman who asked for a tax abatement because of failing health was referred to the board of civil authority.

Warrants approved for the month were as follows: O. J. L. Matthews, $84.55, services as assessor; Martin Riley, $84.20, A. M. Rossi, $84.50, services as assessors; Will Averill, $50, painting signs, street account; C. W. Averill & Co., $33.40, supplies, street and fire accounts; H. L. N. Parker, $10.45, repairs, street, water and fire account; N. D. Phelps Co., $262.44, street, sidewalk, water and fire accounts; Tilden Shoe Co., $21, boots, fire account; Standard Oil Co., $407.36, oil, street sprinkling account; D. M. Miles Coal Co., $804.30, coal, state highway and public buildings accounts; Howard Cole, $35, assisting city engineer; George A. Reed, $112.50, services as city engineer; Edwin Keast, $41.85, services as alderman.

Cutler Bros., $35.08, board and feed, water and fire accounts; James Mackay, $106, salary and miscellaneous accounts; Montpelier Book Bindery, $43.00, water and public records accounts; town of Orange, $54.38, taxes, water account; Anne Robertson, $43, services in water office; Consolidated Lighting Co., $51.61, supplies, city buildings and fire accounts; Morse & Jackson, $330.45, coal, city, buildings account; Old Colony Trust Co., $154.44, services on school bonds; Vt. Tel. & Tel. Co., $25.60, service and tolls; R. L. Clark, $30.25, feed, fire account; J. H. Jones, $16.64, lay, fire account; W. F. Shepard, $41.56, services as overseer; W. F. Shepard, $62.90, received for support of the poor; Red Cross pharmacy, $19.25, supplies, health account; Dr. J. H. Woodruff, $41.66, services as city health officer; Old Colony Trust Co., $47,000, to pay city notes maturing Aug. 10, temporary loans account; J. E. Hoban, $54.20, services as alderman; street department, $450.23, street, street sprinkling, sewer, surface sewer and sidewalk accounts; water department payroll, $77.98, fire department payroll, $111.81, paid department payroll, $90.34; G. A. Bemis, $14, services as janitor; J. B. Dowers, $6, labor at the city dump; Consolidated Lighting Co., $657.88, lighting streets, city buildings and fire accounts.

Catcher "Bob" Schang, a brother to "Wallie" Schang, the Mackmen catcher, has been sold by the St. Joseph, Mo., Western league club to Pittsburgh in the National league. The younger Schang will remain with the St. Joseph club until the Western league race is over.

Stankard of the Springfield club is still considered one of the most dangerous hitters in the Eastern association. The Littleton-St. Johnsbury intercity series now stands two to one in favor of the New Hampshire side. The next game will be played on Thursday of this week. Lou Magee, the star hitter of the St. Louis Nationals, is having his best year in the big leagues.

GRANITEVILLE.

Paving Cutters Held Annual Picnic Saturday in Gazeley's Grove.

The paving cutters, with their wives and lady friends, held their annual picnic in Gazeley's grove Saturday. After partaking of a hearty luncheon, games were participated in, the first being a football game between the married and single men, the latter winning a score of 2 to 1. Next on the program was a baseball game between Graniteville and Websterville, the former winning by a score of 11 to 3. The biggest attraction of the day was tug-of-war between teams representing England, Ireland, Scotland and Sweden, six men on a side. The first pull was Ireland vs. Sweden, then England vs. Scotland. Ireland won over Sweden, as did Scotland over England. On the final pull, between England and Scotland, the latter won.

Other sports included a girls' race, for those under eight years old, won by Minnie Wilson, with Mary Moran 2d and Jennie Wilson 3d. Boy's race (under eight years), George Mearns 1st, Robert Littlewood 2d, Allen Cameron 3d. Girls' race (under 13 years), Agnes Moran 1st, Eva Wilson 2d, Mary Cameron 3d. Boys' race (under 14 years), Frank Moran 1st, George Cameron 2d, Alfred Chapman 3d. Single ladies' race, Violet Pratt 1st, Esther Beattie 2d. Married ladies' race, Mrs. Stewart 1st, Mrs. Cameron 2d, Mrs. Littlewood 3d. Three-legged race, G. Moir and Robert Dalgleish 1st, J. Armstrong and M. Smith 2d. Old men's race, John Donald 1st, George Laird 2d.

Refreshments were served during the afternoon and evening and all went home satisfied they had had a pleasant day. The Barre Paving and Contracting company, as usual, gave a generous donation to the funds of the picnic.

COMMERCIAL SURGERY FOR TREES.

Tree Surgery as a Science Every Year More Generally Appreciated.

A cavity in a decayed tree is something like a cavity in a decayed tooth. If an unreliable tree surgeon who has been called in to save the tree only partially removes the diseased part of the wood, uses no antiseptic coatings in the cavity and fills it up with cement the tree is no more cured than is a person whose decayed tooth has not been properly filled by a dentist. The only difference is that after the tree cavity has been covered, if the work has not been properly done, the tree has no way of making its trouble known except by further decay.

Within the last decade there has been a great increase in demand for surgeons to repair decaying shade trees. But the possibilities of practicing fraud in this profession like the instance just cited have tempted so many unreliable people to dabble in the science that tree surgery has fallen somewhat into disrepute. The U. S. department of agriculture realizes that commercial tree surgery should occupy a high place in the estimation of the public, and has recently issued a pamphlet entitled, "Practical Tree Surgery," wherein suggestions are made for improvement along these lines.

As in all professions, there are reliable and unreliable men and firms competing for contracts in tree surgery. In recent years so many occasions have arisen when property owners felt the necessity of calling in commercial tree surgeons to attend to their trees that there are now numerous firms, both honest and dishonest, engaged in the work. Usually tree surgery is practical in connection with some nearly related line, but often it is taken up as a business of itself. When a blight such as chestnut bark disease, infects the tree of a district, the community, or individuals in it, will often spend considerable money to control ravages which may rob the whole district of its trees. An affection like the chestnut bark disease is contagious. It requires scientific knowledge of the disease to know whether an affected tree should be destroyed at once or is worth treating. It requires scientific training to understand the manner of growth of the fungi causing the disease and what treatment is best.

Many individuals who have had faith in tree surgery have lost it through following the advice of unreliable tree surgeons who claimed to be able to diagnose a case, but whose main interest was to collect a good sum of money for their work.

Misuse of Pruning Hooks and Climbing Devices.

Besides the careless felling of decayed cavities in trees, there are other practices of certain so-called "tree surgeons" that do the trees more harm than good. Many of these "surgeons" as well as the people who employ them, do not realize the danger arising from fresh injuries to a tree. The tree owner should realize that prompt attendance to fresh injuries will largely do away with the need of tree surgery 15 or 20 years hence. The tree surgeons must realize that if they make fresh injuries in the living bark, when treating decayed portions, they are laying the tree open to more dangers of infection that will result in further decay.

Just as a person is subject to infection through cuts and scratches, trees are rendered subject to infection by having their living bark torn. Notwithstanding this, many tree surgeons use pruning hooks and climbing spurs and cut fresh gashes in the tree. To break off small dead branches a workman may use a long pruning hook as though it were a club. In doing so the hook usually causes injury to the young bark near by. Every new wound may furnish a new point of entrance for decay, even though the old dead branch may have been removed.

Music a Feature of "The Romancers."

Lovers of good music, as well as those interested in the theatre, will take great pleasure in the performance of "The Romancers" this evening at 8 o'clock on the grounds of Mrs. Charles Smith on Elm street. The Frank Lee Short company has an unusually fine quartet and the singing of the old French ballads in the open air is a novelty of great charm. It is of special interest to note that the company has just engaged the well known tenor, Charles Tingle, who last season sang the leading role in "The Madcap Duchess," and has already been engaged by Henry W. Savage for next season in the great success, "Sari." Mr. Tingle will sing John McCormick's great song, "I Hear You Calling Me."

Tickets for the play are on sale at Drown's drugstore and at the seating space is limited, an early reservation is desirable. Prices, 75c and $1, and there are a few unreserved seats at 50c.—Adv.

His Angel

By SADIE OLCOTT

"Good morning, Della."
"Good morning, Margaret."
"I see you have a letter in your hand. I suppose it's for Howard?""It is."
"It's breaking your engagement with him, maybe?"
"No, it isn't. Why do you think that?"
"Can it be that you haven't heard what every one else knows?""What's that?"
"I supposed, of course, you knew it or I wouldn't have said anything."

"Heard what? For heaven's sake, stop this fooling and tell me what you're talking about!"

"Why, they say Howard is engaged to a girl in Arkville, where he lives."

"Who says it?"

"It's common talk."
There was silence for a few moments. Then Della said: "Yes, I know all about it. I am going to write Howard what I think of him."

She passed on, but instead of going directly to the postoffice she went to her home by a roundabout course and, sitting at her writing desk, wrote Howard Benjamin a letter of a different kind entirely from the one she had intended to post.

In a couple of days Mr. Benjamin was announced. Della had had time to at least cool down and wished that she might have taken more time in the writing of the letter she had sent him. As she remembered it, her feelings had run away with her. She was surprised that Howard should have come to see her after having received it, but supposed he had come to return her letters and demand his own.

To her surprise Howard advanced to meet her as she entered the room with his customary smile, took her in his arms and kissed her. She blushed to think of the disagreeable things she had written him, wondering the while whether there was any truth in the reports as to his inconstancy. She was much puzzled.

"I came down for the week end, sweetheart, to be with you," he said. "I couldn't stand to be separated from you any longer without one kiss." He gave her a dozen. "But how cold your hands are! Is there anything the matter with you?"

"Oh, no; I'm very well! I'm so glad you've come."

Della trembled lest this were preliminary to an announcement of his defection and his contempt for her on account of her complaint, just to make it more effective. But as her lover went on in the usual strain, interrupted only by an occasional kiss, she became gradually reassured as to the falsity of the reports that had reached her. But her letter—Howard must have come away just before its delivery. She dreaded to have him go back and get it. What would he think of her, he who had assured her time and again that she was an angel, better fitted for heaven than this wicked world?

Howard left his sweetheart thoroughly convinced of his constancy, but in terror at his returning to receive the imprecations she had written. Every time the postman left any mail she went to the delivery box with dread and grasped the letters with a trembling hand. It was several days before she received a missive from her lover, and when she did she was afraid to open it. She took it to her room, and, after taking it up and putting it down several times, she broke the seal.

It began by stating that to make up work left undone, to visit her, he had been busy day and night since his return. Then he went on to speak of those happy hours they had spent together and how he could count the days till he would see her again. Not a word about that horrible letter of hers. What could it mean? Had he received it, and was he too high minded, too generous, too magnanimous to take advantage of it, knowing that it had been written under a false impression?

In a few weeks he came again, and this time Della felt sure that he would speak of the subject that troubled her. She wished he would and have it over with. But he did not. He was just as affectionate and kind and loving as ever and evidently still considered her an angel.

Weeks passed and Della began to believe that her letter had miscarried. She inquired of the postman as to where undelivered letters were taken, and he told her they all were sent to the dead letter office in Washington. Letters misdirected or unclaimed or without stamps were to be found in the dead letter office. Della wrote there and received a card stating that the letter she had written about was there unstamped, and if she would send 2 cents it would be sent her.

When the letter came Della found that she had been so angered that she had not written her address on it and had neglected to put a stamp on it. She began to read it; but, coming to that which now in her cooler moments she was ashamed of, she tore it into bits and threw the bits into the fire.

When Howard came again he noticed a change in his fiancée. The cloud that had been resting upon her had been lifted.

"My angel!" he said.

"Oh, please don't," she protested, burying her burning cheek on his bosom.
